

The Daily Courant.

Saturday, July 25. 1713.

From the Paris Gazette, dated July 29.

From the Camp before Landau, July 16.

AFTER the taking of the second Redoubt, which was carried Sword in Hand the Night between the 11th and 12th, three Saps were begun from the second Parallel, and a fourth from the second Lunette. The 13th, a third Parallel was begun to be formed on the Right at the Head of the Saps, which Parallel takes in all the Space between the Gate of France and the Outlet of the River, and is but 25 Toises distant from the Angles of the foremost Covered-Way. Saps were likewise carried on from that Parallel to the Glacis of the third Lunette or Redoubt of Melac. The Night between the 14th and 15th the Besieged sprung a Mine at the Head of the said Saps, which blew up the Workmen, of whom fifteen or twenty were killed, or buried, some of which were saved. They sprung three others in different Places, which did no Execution. The Parallel on the Left is prolonged, and terminated by a second Redoubt. Men are working to raise on that Parallel Batteries which will play athwart the greatest Part of the foremost Covered-Way and of the Lunettes, which we are near enough to attack, the Besieged not having made any Sally since that on the 2d Instant, to retard the Works: But we chuse to advance by the Sap, for discovering Mines and saving Men.

From the Paris Gazette, dated July 29.

Paris, July 29. We have received Advice from Marseilles, that the Marquis de Montolieu, eldest Commodore of the Gallies, died the 15th of this Month in the 66th Year of his Age. He had succeeded his Father in the Commission of Captain of a Galley, which had likewise been born by his Grandfather. He had distinguished himself on several Occasions, particularly in commanding the King's Gallies and Men of War at Cadiz, besieged by Sea by the Enemy's Fleet, and by Land by an Army of 15000 Men.

From the Paris Letter, dated July 28.

Paris, July 28. Letters from the Camp before Landau of the 18th Instant, advise, that our Workmen continued carrying on double Saps towards the three Lunettes which are on the Salient Angles of the foremost Covered-Way; but there being Intelligence that there are Mines in all those Angles, our Men cannot advance but with very great Precaution. However they had approached very near the Pallisade which covered the Lunette that is nearest to the Outlet of the Waters, and after having encompassed that Lunette on the Right and Left, 15 Grenadiers were ordered out on each Side the Night of the 17th, who drove the Enemy from the Place of Arms in the Angle of the Lunette, and there made a Lodgement. About two a Clock after Midnight the Enemy returned to the Charge in great Number, but immediately five Companies of Grenadiers of the Regiments of Medoc and Navarre were ordered out of the Trenches, and they advancing too far were exposed to all the Enemy's shot, so that we lost there above 65 Men and 10 Officers killed or wounded. The Prince de Talmont, Lieutenant-General, who was in the Trenches, was beaten down by a Gabion half-filled and received a Contusion. Mean while the Enemy were vigorously repulsed, and we remained Masters of the Lodgement. The Enemy likewise sprung two Mines under the Glacis, which had no Effect; the Mine which they blew up the Night between the 14th and 15th had a Cavern where the Powder was lodged 30 Foot in Diameter. Our Men continue working to discover the Mines, and to fill up the Ditch of the foremost Covered-Way, that the Miners may be set to work under it, and 'twas reckoned we might be ready to attack it in three or four Days. Our Batteries for Bombs are well served, and have not been useless; but those for Cannon had not yet done much Service, because of the bad Weather, which added to the Necessity of proceeding by the Sap, has much retarded us; and we should have been more delayed, had the Enemy defended their Posts more obstinately than they have done. We have not lost yet above 8 or 900 Men killed or wounded, with 5 or 6 Ingeniers, but we have 36 more Ingeniers left.

There

There are Letters from Paris of the 24th of July, which advise, that 'twas feared the French would be obliged to raise the Siege of Landau, because of the Rains, and the Difficulty of furnishing the Army with Provisions sufficient; the Court not having begun long enough beforehand to make Preparations for that Siege: That this Difficulty of getting Provisions, proceeded in part from the Opposition made by the People to the carrying of Corn out of the several Provinces: That near Toulouse there had been above 100 Men and some Women killed in a Tumult: And that the Intendant of Languedoc was gone Post from Paris by Order from Court.
